

Sekenani Camp is nestled beside a small brook in the foothills of the Ngama Highlands and is on the boundary of the Masai Mara Game Reserve. The camp is built at the source of the Sekenani River which rises from a rock pool at the east end of the camp and forms the stream, which flows in front of each tent.

Sekenani Camp comprises of fifteen well-designed and spacious tents that combine simple elegance with comfort. Each one benefits from views out across the surrounding hills and valleys and yet provides a secluded and private setting in the bush. During the evening buffalo and elephant can be seen drinking from the brook while leopard sightings have also been known. www.crocodileracers.com

The en suite bathroom, complete with a full-length bath, makes these among possibly the most beautifully appointed tents in the Mara. A suspension bridge connects the guest tents with the dining room area where guests can enjoy freshly prepared dishes and a well-stocked bar. The patio area is set amongst the well-maintained grounds whilst enjoying views of the Ngama Hills in the distance.

Evening log fires in front of the dining room are the perfect setting for guests to enjoy a pre-dinner 'sundowner' while listening to the wild sounds of Africa.

Sekenani Camp proximity to the Masai Mara provides ample game viewing opportunities for guests including some great elephant sightings on the fringes of the forested hills. In addition to game drives Sekenani Camp offers walking safaris in the surrounding hills.

Guests are escorted by Masai guides who demonstrate their extensive knowledge of plants and animals while surrounded by spectacular landscapes in every direction. Over two hundred species of birds have been identified within one kilometer of the camp. Other popular activities include balloon safaris and a half-day fishing expedition to Lake Victoria.
